

Sir Walter Elliot

Age: Most agreeable

Appearance: Pleasing to the eye

Education: Exemplary

Profession: Did not disclose

‘Are you a man or a mouse?’ is a question best answered elsewhere, as in this case the solution should be blindingly obvious. A mouse squeaks. A man takes action. Doing nothing is the pass time of rodents and is unthinkable for the likes of I.

Captain Frederick Tilney

Age: Entirely appropriate

Appearance: Noble bearing

Education: As you'd expect

Profession: To be proud of

Despite a predilection for the unnecessary frivolities of life's utmost excesses, what cannot be underestimated is the significance of a man's bearing and the profoundly intense impact it can have upon you.

Mr John Willoughby

Age: Suitable for courting

Appearance: Handsome features

Education: Exceptional

Profession: Noble in the extreme

It is quite common, I believe, to think unkindly upon your fellow man, but not such a man as this. I know within my heart for him to be bastion of charm and humility in these otherwise confusing and churlish times.

Mr Frank Churchill

Age: The best years

Appearance: A quiet dignity

Education: Formal and thorough

Profession: Wholesome

I will carry this man's sublime countenance and pleasing demeanour with and wear it as a badge of pride. To expose yourself to life's most harsh and critical realities. You must stand firm. Stare yourself in the eye and accept your true self.
